

Christoph Lütge

Was hält eine Gesellschaft zusammen?

Ethik im Zeitalter der Globalisierung

Many social philosophers and ethicists contend that a modern society cannot remain stable merely by its citizens obeying all of its rules. Such prominent theoreticians as J. Habermas, J. Rawls, D. Gauthier or R. Rorty hold the view that the citizens of a modern society must exhibit additional anthropological qualities which are termed moral surpluses here. Christoph Lütge argues, however, that no moral surplus is immune to erosion by systematic counter-incentives and that anthropological qualities in general cannot serve as a basis for ethics in the globalized world. An order ethics, which is based on weaker prerequisites, namely the characteristics of situations and their basic conditions (orders), is more likely to count on cross-cultural approval in the era of globalization.

Christoph Lütge Geboren 1969; Studium der Wirtschaftsinformatik und Philosophie; 1999 Promotion; 2005 Habilitation; Inhaber des Peter Löscher-Stiftungslehrstuhls für Wirtschaftsethik, TU München; Direktor des TUM Institute for Ethics in Artificial Intelligence; Distinguished Visiting Professor, Universität Tokio.

<https://orcid.org/0000-0002-3870-4789>

2007. XI, 293 pages. EdG 140

ISBN 978-3-16-162918-1

DOI 10.1628/978-3-16-162918-1

eBook PDF €109.00

ISBN 978-3-16-149408-6

cloth €109.00

Order now:

<https://www.mohrsiebeck.com/en/book/was-haelt-eine-gesellschaft-zusammen-9783161629181/>

Phone: +49 (0)7071-923-17

Fax: +49 (0)7071-51104