Psalm research in recent decades has developed a new focus across nations and denominations: Psalm-Exegesis is complemented by Psalter-Exegesis. In this focus, the connection between intertextuality and the formation of the Psalter is highlighted, while at the same time the relation of the Masoretic Text to Psalms in the Dead Sea Scrolls and the Septuagint is critically reviewed.

This volume contains the revised papers given at an international conference at LMU Munich in April 2018. All papers reflect the current interest in questions about the composition and intention of the Psalter. The volume presents innovative methodological reflections as well as fresh perspectives on historical theology in order to illuminate the formation of the Psalter.
