

Emotions through Time

From Antiquity to Byzantium Edited by Douglas Cairns, Martin Hinterberger, Aglae Pizzone and Matteo Zaccarini

[Emotions through Time]

Published in English.

This volume is the first to explore ancient and Byzantine Greek emotions from a comparative and synoptic perspective. A distinguished international cast of 17 authors deploys the methodologies of Classics, Byzantine Studies, and emotion history to uncover the complex interactions between ancient and Byzantine emotionology. Its wide-ranging chapters shed new light on the Byzantine emotional universe and its impact on medieval and early modern culture and explore the reception and influence of ancient emotion concepts in Byzantine sources. Textual sources are given due prominence, but the volume also investigates wider phenomena such as visual and material culture, performance, ritual, and the creation of emotional landscapes.

Douglas Cairns is Professor of Classics in the School of History, Classics, and Archaeology, University of Edinburgh.
